SCOTTISH WIDOWS TRAINING DAY

Scottish Widows sought a contemporary venue with advanced audio-visual capabilities for their internal training day. The Ministry's ground floor spaces offered the unique setup they needed, providing an ideal environment for both large group sessions and more focused discussions.

The training day was attended by 60 guests, necessitating a cabaret-style furniture arrangement. In addition to the main training area, the event utilized two of The Ministry's Meeting Rooms. These spaces were reserved for intensive discussions and training sessions with the senior leadership teams of Scottish Widows. The advanced technology available in these rooms ensured high engagement and effective communication with attendees, supporting the training objectives.

The Ministry's state-of-the-art audio-visual equipment played a crucial role in maintaining attendee engagement throughout the day. High-quality displays, sound systems, and interactive tools were seamlessly integrated into the sessions, enhancing the overall learning experience.

To conclude the training day on a high note, a champagne and cocktail reception was organised. Guests enjoyed bowl food service provided by The London Kitchen, offering a variety of delicious and convenient options. This reception not only provided a relaxed and enjoyable end to the day but also allowed for additional networking and informal discussions among attendees.

The training day was a significant success, receiving positive feedback from both the Scottish Widows team and the attendees. The combination of a contemporary and versatile venue, thoughtful setup, advanced technology, and excellent catering contributed to a productive and enjoyable event. The ability to seamlessly transition between large group sessions and focused meetings was particularly appreciated.

“All 60 people were new to the building and were absolutely stunned by the vibe, décor, and general feel of the building along with the event organisation, staff and AV. It suited us more than any other venue we have used previously in London!”
